DMONTON BULLETIN, JULY 4, 1891.

THE NEW POLICY. Whatever may be the present faults or future shortcomings of the new cabinet, its first move, to reduce the duty on sugar and thereby reduce the price to the consumer two cents a pound, is most commendable. This country has been treated to so much political fire works and fudge since the advent of the national policy, that a stroke of practical politics which materially reduces the price of one of the prime necessaries of life comes as a surprise almost amounting to a shock, which is not lessened by the an-nouncement that it is proposed to make up nouncement that it is proposed to make up a great part of the loss to the revenue by increased ecomony. While commending to the utmost the new joint planks of reduced barston and economicial expenditure in the platform of the new cabinet it will be well to remember that it was this policy which shipweeked the Mackenzie government in 1878, the country preferring a policy of high textures and gentle. of high taxation and reckless expenditure under the name of the national policy. No doubt low taxation and economicial expendi-ture is the best and truest national policy, but the leader of the government will find it neessary to demonstrate this so clearly that his own party—rallied and held together as is has been during the past thirteen years by the idea that high taxation and wasteful ex-penditure constituted national prosperity— will understand it, believe in it and enthuse over it. This latter is where the pinch will come in. How is ethusiasm to be worked ome in. How is consistent to be worked up for a scheme which has "nothing in it," for the enthusiasts. That was the strong paint of the national policy, of the C. P. R. bargain, of the Northwest colozization schemes. The ultimate object was of course the good of our beloved country. And to secure that good those who expected to be more immediately benefitted through promore immediately benefitted through pro-bective tariffs, railway bonuses, large and supposed to be fat slices of public land or really fat graving dock contracts, could afford not only to rend the heavens with their shouts in favor of the old flag, the old leader and the old policy but thereally should be leader and the old policy, but they could also afford to go down deep in their pockets for the dust wherewith sometimes elections are the dust wherewith sometimes elections are won, governments tetained in power and poli-cies perpetuated There is nothing like that con-nected with a policy of retrenchment. The aggregate saving amounts to millions but the saving to the individual is very small; so small that although he may feel and appre-ciate it, his appreciation is not strong chough to compel him to action in support of the measure which benefits of to compel him to action in support of the measure which benefitted him. In this way the government which adopts a policy of re-tranchment fights against odds and requires superior ability in order to carry it through— what is make the unjointy of the people see exactly wherein they are being personally banefitted.

DOMINION DAY.

Wednesday was a great day for Edmonton.
The national holiday was celebrated here in a way that left nothing to be desired either as to patriotism or sport. Race horses had been brought from Calgary and Red Deer and Battle river and with the home stock carefully fit ed for the several events. Foot racers, jumpers and all around athletes has been getting up their muscle for weeks and every evening the track had been crowdand every evening the track had been crowded with excited sports and fringed with enthusiastic spectators all getting ready for the first. The day itself was splendid throughout, the only fault being that it was rather warm at times The weather had been settled for some days. Crops were doing well and the busy season had not arrived. The first material sign of the C. & E. railway had arrived, a party of graders being camped immediately across the river ready commence work. The people were in better spirits work. The people were in better spirits work. The people were in better spirits than usual, the occasion was favorable and the roads good. Consequently there was a larger turn out than ever before in the history of Edmonton. All the way from 1,000 to 1,500 people were on the ground. They came from Beaver lake, Victoria, Lac la Biche, Lake St. Ann, the Jasper House and even Fort Chipewyan sent a continent. An important addition to the usual muster was a large number of railroaders from the pearest camps out for a day's holifrom the nearest camps, out for a day's holiday. This season's new arrivals also mustered in strong force. The programme was long, the competitiors numerous and the events for blood every time. The interest was so well kept up that 7 p. m. found the greater part of the crowd in their places and hungry for more. All things considered the crowd was very orderly and peaceably disposed. Everything passed off well except that there was a considered that that there was a somewhat serious accident after the sports were over. Several mounted men were dashing around the track having a scrub race, when the horse ridden by John Graham struck Pierre St. Germain, of Battle river, who was standing on the track, knocking him senseless and breaking his nose.
